C. Griffith Appreciates New Move Being Made to Dispose Of War Tax Extra Pennies

RACING SEASON

"I surely appreciate the efforts of the inwapapers and wire vervices throughout the country in their atempt to help my Bat and Ball Fund," asid the Old Fox last night. "This new move of asking the club owners throughout the country to contribute the extra pennies collected on the war tax to the Bat and Ball Fund is a great one. "The magnates intend to put this extra money to some good cause and I believe that the Bat and Ball Fund should be the first one they think of. I did not make any suggestions of this kind at the recent meeting in New York because both of the big leagues were generous enough to offer me one day in which the Bat and Ball Fund is to receive the largest amount of the receives.

Magnates Should Donate Over Tax to Bats and Balls for Sammies.

Baseball magnates, big and little, from the National and American leagues down to the smallest Class D team have an opportunity to do a big service for Uncle Sam's soldiers without a cent of expense to themselves. The magnates have decided not "to bother with pennies" on war taxes this year, but will charge even money. This means that 25-cent scats will sell for 30 cents instead of 28 cents, the exact amount if the war tax of 10 per cent was charged and 75-cent seats for 85 cents instead of 33. There will, of course, be no excess pennies

That's a fine patriotic thing to do, but there's a war cause much closer to baseball than the Red Cross, a cause which needs funds and which would be maintained by these extra

McGovern flashed across the sky in 1888 when he was 19 years old. This fight made McGovern. He knocked out Palmer in the first round. One punch brought him the bantam-weight championship of the world, and $10,000.

Light-weights and feather-weights were sidestepping him Corbett looked like a set-up and a match was arranged at Hartford. New York fans by the thousands flocked to the ringside. McGovern had not fought in the East for more than a year and Gotham backed its idol at odds ranging from 4 to 1 to McGovern was beaten by a laugh corner and laughed at McGovern.

"Come on out and take your licking.
Terry." he sneered across the ring.
They were not sneering at McGovern those days and Terry was wild. As the gong sounded he dashed across the ring meeting Corbett in his own corner. The two rounds that followed embraced more fighting than a dozen of the 10-round affairs of today.

An overhand right was Terry's downfall—that and Corbett's sneering laugh, which caused McGovern to THE SAMMIES Near the end of the first round that right crashed against McGovern's head and he went to the floor. He was up in a flash as the bell ended
